It used to happen to me too and I am sure it is not a problem with windows XP or service pack 2 or whatever, because I use windows ME. when you quit, do you run the game in a different resolution than your desktop? that was why mine froze and I had to restart the computer.

to be honest I think it is a problem with your PC overheating when playing. I asked about this problem a while ago (on these forums mind you) and was told my fan wasn't fast enough to cool the CPU. I mean look at this:

that's without a game on.. notice one of the temps is at overheat level and another is on its way up. my suggestion would be to first find out your fan speed. if it's higher than mine, consider a new one.
