They're running great for me... I am monitoring the server carefully. Bandwidth is not a problem. Mine is unmetered.

Honestly though, they can be slow at times. Sometimes it seems like they will just go down for 4 or 5 minutes, and I can't click on other things. Other times it takes up to 15 seconds to post a reply or click a link.

It seems pretty random, but the rest of the time it's pretty fast.

I hate to admit it, but I have had occasional problems with very long load times for the board. I also get page not found messages, but a refresh or two usually fixes that.

I think part of it has to do with the image gallery. I'm working on rewriting it at the moment. When it's not using resources on the database server, things should improve, and if not, I will bug the web host. I get a little bit of lag at times, too... but it hasn't got any better or worse with the addition of these forums... you just notice it more because you're here more.

Crimson, maybe you should put in some code for your image galleries that auto-deletes them if they aren't opened or accessed for say a month or so.

Most people upload images just so they can post a link to them say for maybe a post or two, then they never see the light of day again.

I do have code to track hits and last access time. I was hoping people would clear out their own with a reminder, but perhaps I will have to change that. Delete any images not accessed in a month.

n00bstories has always been pretty slow for me

It hasn't really changed much with the new forums.

Although I have really bad routing with my connection.

This is what happens for me also, it will be very quick and then "boom" everything slows down.

I did have the forums go down for 5 minutes once though no page would load I left it for 5 minutes and it worked again. Apart form that once I have never had a problem.
