US should be "embarrassed" over failure to find WMDs:

ex-spies

Retired CIA intelligence analyst Ray McGovern told AFP:

"Some of my colleagues are virtually certain that there will be some weapons of mass destruction found, even though they might have to be planted

04/17/03

WASHINGTON (AFP) - The US government should be "embarrassed" over the apparent failure to uncover weapons of mass destruction in Iraq, the main justification for going to war, retired intelligence officials said Thursday.

"It's going to be very embarrassing when it turns out they have nothing to declare," said former defense intelligence analyst Eugene Betit.

Another, former CIA station chief Ray Close, said: "I'm hoping they will be embarrassed into acknowledging a role for some independent body. And who could it be but the UN?"

As the "smoking gun" continued to elude US sleuths in Iraq, chief UN weapons inspector Hans Blix called for experts to return to the country to determine whether the weapons allegations had any foundation.

Adding to the pressure, Russia, a veto-wielding member of the UN Security Council, said it would not support the lifting of UN sanctions against Iraq unless UN inspectors confirmed the absence of weapons of mass destruction.

But Washington has so far rejected such calls, and US Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld on Thursday sought to deflect concerns that evidence could be planted.

"The (US search) teams have been trained in chain of control, really like a crime scene," Rumsfeld told Pentagon staff Thursday.

He said: "They will have people with them who will validate things, they will have the ability to take pictures, and to make sure that the control over any piece of evidence is as clear as it possibly can be."

Rumsfeld warned however: "That will not stop certain countries, and certain types of people from claiming, inaccurately, that it was planted."

Retired CIA intelligence analyst Ray McGovern told AFP: "Some of my colleagues are virtually certain that there will be some weapons of mass destruction found, even though they might have to be planted.

"I'm just as sure that some few will be found, but not in an amount that by any stretch would justify the charge of a threat against the US or anyone else."

He added: "Even if the planting was discovered by and by, they'll say, 'ok, the weapons were planted -- fine.'"

McGovern said he was alluding to a remark by Secretary of State Colin Powell after it emerged that a letter purporting to show that Iraq had sought to procure uranium from Niger -- a key argument in the case for war and cited in President George W. Bush's January 28 State of the Union address -- was a forgery.

Powell told NBC: "It was the information that we had. We provided it. If that information is inaccurate, fine."

McGovern and 24 other former intelligence officials in the CIA, State and Defense Departments, Army Intelligence and FBI formed a group called Veteran Intelligence Professionals for Sanity (VIPS).

They made their first public statement on February 5, critiquing Powell's presentation before the UN Security Council.

CIA spokesman Tom Crispell, asked for comment on the former officials' remarks Thursday, said: "They're criticizing policy, not intelligence."

It's OK, no matter what there will be idiots trying to find something to justify their own uninformed and ignorant views.

They protested the war while we won and lifted the crushing boot of a tyrannical dictator. With the war going so well, they focus on the lack of huge stockpiles of WMD, when they are found they will find some new negative to focus on. When everything is done, and the troops are back, they'll focus on the economy. And when the economy gets better, they'll find something else. Never ending ignorance and stupidity.

Maybe the liberals need to rethink their strategy. It doesn't seem to be doing them much good to mudsling at the President and the Republicans.

You people are more than happy to give the UN THOUSANDS of days to search for WMD but only want to give the USA a month or so.

Please. :rolleyes:

the search hasn't even started yet and already we've found missiles that they weren't supposed to have, they used a remote controlled plane they weren't supposed to have, we've found documents they weren't supposed to have and there have been iraqi scientists who've come forward to say they buried shit right before the attack. they've also said that they've been supporting al queda.

war wasn't imminent at any time. he was supposed to declare weapons by dec. 8. when we saw him lying again, we started building up. we then waited almost 4 months longer before attacking. all along we told him come clean or be attacked. at any time he could have come forth and said "ok, i want what's best, here is what you wanted"

personally, i don't care if he had the weapons or not... we should have attacked simply because of what he was doing to his people. hell, milosevic(sp?) did far less to his people and yet clinton was "justified" in attacking him.

if there were no oil in Iraq, would the tree huggers still be complaining about the war? my opinion is... NO!

they complained only because we have a republican president and there is oil in Iraq so they can use it as an excuse to complain about the guy they don't want in office.

You are you dumbass. You can't dump your bloodline. Although I wish they would have dumped you. When you reside within the borders of a country and are governed under their laws, no matter how harsh, you are the public of that country. Just because they didn't like each other, doesn't make them independent. Otherwise Hollywood would have seceded from the Union when Bush became President. The people there are Bush's people just as much as the Kurds are/were Saddam's.

Just when you thought a person couldn't get that stupid, you prove them wrong every chance you get.

"I stand firmly in the fact that the Kurds are not his people." I don't see how someone could say something that stupid, and yet, you seem to come up with these stupid comments in every reply. Now how is it a fact that these Kurds, who live inside of Iraq, weren't his people? They lived inside of his country, and under his complete control, and yet they weren't his people? Come on, wake up and use that overwhelmingly small mass of jello you call a brain for once.

Lol... Thank you for another really stupid comment, they just keep on coming! "...just because you were born and raised there...that doesn't make you one of them.". So, just because they were born, raised, and are living in Iraq, they're not Iraqi? Yeah I know, you're going to say something stupid like "they're Kurds not Iraqi". Which would be like saying "Since those in California were born, raised, and are living in the USA, they're not American, they're Californian"

"Otherwise I'm half American, quarter Indonesian and a quarter Venezuelan" If you are of American, Indonesian and Venezuelan descent, then yes you are.

"say what you will...but you're still the one that is responding to your own post." Right... Yeah I can see how me quoting and replying to your stupid comments that I'm "responding to my own post". :rolleyes: I see your stupidity has reached new levels yet again.

What a load of trash IMO. Or to put it another way : you have to be kidding me.

After I saw the first instance of "*that must have been planted!" I knew exactly where it was going.

So lemme get this straight, when Al-JeezComeOn TV shows the US killing civilians & 75 year old farmers take down Heli's its true BUT when the US presents 'evidence' its false er planted.

*that : anything that supports or works in the US's favor.

Once again, could you maybe give the US shit, 6months a year just sometime a little more. It is *AMAZING* that we must even have this discussion considering the UN and it's stint in Iraq. Who do you think is more observant : Hans Blix or the former Iraqi Minster Of Information?

So please, pretty please could you realize this point is dead in the water?

The Kurds aren't considered his people there. You all obviously have no knowledge of foreign politics and morals. In Indonesia...the Muslims dont consider the Christians their people...and vice versa. The Irish Catholics and Protestants have been killing each other for decades...but we not only do nothing there...we are completely ignoring it. Take a position and stick with it...you cant say people are evil for killing their own people and then do nothing about a country thats been torn by it for decades.

Oh yes, we're the ones who "obviously have no knowledge of foreign politics and morals". Don't you think that's kind of ironic coming from someone who isn't intelligent enough to come up with something that isn't extremely stupid, or evidence to back anything he says up?

"I know I'm wrong, but maybe if I say they're the ones who don't know anything it'll look like I'm the one who's actually right..."

Sorry but, one religion not liking another religion isn't politics. Just because they don't like the kurds doesn't mean they're not Iraqi. They were born, raised and are living in Iraq, which was his country, which would make them his people, if they liked it or not.

I could think of many more examples like the "Egyptians enslaving their own people" as you would put it. America did it with African Americans...for centuries they were born and raised in the USA...Not to mention the Indians from which we stole this land. And during the dark ages when people accused of heresy were tortured untill they confessed to the right thing and then were killed or were just tortured to death...they didn't see that as killing their own people...they saw it as redemption or some crap like that. I'm not saying he was right in gassing them...but the arguement that they were his own people holds little water...as he and the people around him did not see them as his people

Duke of Nukesoh...so the iraqis just all of the sudden decided to go to democracy while Saddam was still in power? :rolleyes:

Why do you think he used WMD's on his OWN people. Iraqi's have always wanted a REAL Democracy. FYI, Iraq with Saddam in power tried to make it look like it was a Democracy. Remember that election last summer. Aparently Saddam won with 99.9% of the vote? The exiled Iraqi's are exiled for a reason. They supported a Democratic government, they left Iraq in fear of being killed or worse tortured.

So to answer your question... Yes the Iraqi's wanted a Democratic government, even when Saddam was in power. You didn't hear much about it because those that spoke for it dissapeared.

Look's like someone never paid attention in class... This would fit under Geography, the Nation and it's people, nationality, etc.

Lol... Now you're desperately trying to find some little thing to hold on to... Believe me, history isn't your thing, niether is Geography, or anything else. You really need to set yourself back a grade or two and re-learn 6-7th grade Geography and History, because you really need it.

Now for the fun part, correcting your stupid comments. You really amaze me with your ability to come up with even dumber stuff for every reply to every discussion.

"you're thinking about everything from an American viewpoint." Oh an "American viewpoint". I guess Geography, Politics and History are only known to and used in America, and we have to resort to using extremely flawed logic and stupid statements to support our arguments, like you?

" The Iraqi people aren't American...no matter how much you want them to be. Wow, they're not Americans? I could have sworn they were!!?! Lol... Come on dumbass, isn't it kind of obvious that they aren't Americans? This has nearly nothing to do with what country they are or are not from. They were born, and are living in the same country--which would make them citizens of that country--under it's leader, they are his people.

"What about the Egyptians enslaving the Jews? were they their own people? I mean...they were born and grew up there for Generations upon Generations" Yes. They were born and live in that country, no matter what religion they are, they are citizens of that country, they might have not been liked and were treated wrong, but they are their people.

"All your attacks are based upon your opinions about me. If I didnt know better...I'd say you were just arguing because you dont like me. In a 4 paragraph post...only one of them wasn't calling me an idiot. Stop arguing for arguements sake." Actually, I didn't call you an idiot in any one of those paragraphs, you idiot. Opinions? I wonder how many severely stupid comments filled with extremely flawed and twisted logic, and no facts in sight, that you have to post before your very low intelligence becomes fact. And yes, you don't know better.

"America did it with African Americans...for centuries they were born and raised in the USA..." For centuries? Slavery was abolished around the end of the civil war, which ended in 1865. America here for "centuries", hell, it wasn't even here for an entire century when Slavery was finally abolished. If you're going to use history to support your side, shouldn't you actually know at least a little bit about it?

"Not to mention the Indians from which we stole this land." First, they aren't Indians, they are Native Americans. Indians are those from India. Native Americans weren't enslaved in or by America, if any of them were, they were by maybe a couple plantations. African Americans made the vast majority of slaves.

"And during the dark ages when people accused of heresy were tortured untill they confessed to the right thing and then were killed or were just tortured to death...they didn't see that as killing their own people..." It was killing their own people dumbass. They were sentenced to death for a "crime", much like those who were accused of witchcraft.

"they saw it as redemption or some crap like that. " Oh yeah, I can see you know what you're talking about, or some crap like that.

"I'm not saying he was right in gassing them...but the argument that they were his own people holds little water...as he and the people around him did not see them as his people" The argument--that a certain group of Iraqi citizens are part of their leaders people--doesn't hold water? How can you say that? Not one thing you've said thus far could hold frozen solid molasses.

You have no clue what-so-ever of what you're talking about, or anything else for that matter. Why do you keep coming back? You know you know nothing about what is being discussed, and every time you say something it's proven wrong immediately.

if sadaam doesn't consider them his peole, then why did he force them to live under his rules? you're an idiot duke.

even if sadaam didn't consider them "his people" the rest of the world did since he was excersizing control over them.

as for jews in egypt, blacks in american slavery, indians...

egypt "kidnapped" those jews from conquered nations. they became their property, not their people. even if they were born of slaves in egypt and grew up there, they were still not egyptians, they were property. the same holds true for blacks in american slavery... they were property sold by warring tribes in africa.

the indians in america were a conquered people. just like every other country in the history of the earth! someone ws always there before the current owners. indians were no different. through a series of wars, land deals and treaties, the current "owners" of america took over. just like england, italy, germany, iraq etc. please don't try to portray americans as evil because we took the land from the indians. we did far less to them than other nations did to the indigineous people on their current lands.

as for kurds... they are sadaam's people. there is no "law" in iraq calling them property. they are citizens of iraq. just like the shiites are citizens of iraq. sadaam treated them badly and killed many of them. in modern socieity, this is considered a bad thing.
now, please goaway you're wasting valuable pixels with your exercise in idiocy.

No one has said they do dumbass, Geography isn't just an American thing.

Quote:You are still looking at everything through an American viewpoint...and the inability to see the other side of the arguement just makes you ignorant American viewpoint? Are you still stuck on this bullshit? Or are you just too stupid to realize that Geography isn't an "American Viewpoint". Your innability to see either side, understand anything, and to come up with an argument that has at least a single supporting fact, and logic that isn't extremely flawed and twisted. You have absolutely no clue about anything that has been discussed in this thread, but you manage to continue to post the same bullshit over and over again.

The argument is "rather or not those that were born and are living in iraq are Iraqi citizens". This has nothing to do with religion.

And where, exactly, is the people's Republic of Kurdistan located?

Nowhere. It doesn't exist. Which means they belong to whatever country they live in. Do the Kurds living in Iran, and Turkey not belong to those respective countries?

What about the South vietnamese that you thought still had a country. If you ask the rulers of Vietnam, I think they would say there's no such animal, they are all just plain old vietnamese now. By your logic, Chechnyans are suddenly autonomous, and not subject to Russian rule, thus by your logic, not Russian citizens (Like it or not). Not according to the Russian government.

Once again, I hope you aren't on any debate team anywhere. They would lose soundly.

Maybee you could get a job in the U.N. inspecting nothing for 12 years, asking for "a little more time".....

What school do you go to?

Geographic region where the Kurds lived is called.....Ready for the answer?..... IRAQ!

This means that the Kurds are Iraqi. Thus they were citizens of Iraq, thus Saddam's people. So GEOGRAPHICALLY, the Kurds are Iraq's/Saddams people.

Good day TWAT!

HA, Your complete and total ignorance and lack of intelligence really amazes me. It's a real mystery how they let you out of Elementary school.

Geography isn't "the earth and it's different terrains" you uneducated fool.

Let's visit the dictionary (something you are obviously unable to use):
Dictionary.com

The study of the earth and its features and of the distribution of life on the earth, including human life and the effects of human activity.

The physical characteristics, especially the surface features, of an area.

A book on geography.

An ordered arrangement of constituent elements: charting a geography of the mind.

geography

\Ge*og"ra*phy\, n.; pl. Geographies. [F. g[e]ographie, l. geographia, fr. Gr. ?; ge`a, gh^, the earth + ? description, fr. ? to write, describe. See Graphic.] 1. The science which treats of the world and its inhabitants; a description of the earth, or a portion of the earth, including its structure, fetures, products, political divisions, and the people by whom it is inhabited.

2. A treatise on this science.

The dictionary definition of Geography is the science/study of the Earth, it's many regions, features, political divisions (governments), and those that inhabit it. Like I said before, this fits completely inside of Geography. The boundaries of a country (Iraq), and it's citizens ("inhabitants", which includes the Kurds). The Kurds are Iraqi citizens, and therefore are part of the people of the country's leader.

The pope was very powerful back then because they were based around the church.

Everything you come up with is completely out of context in the way you try to present it. Everything you try to use to support your end of the discussion has nothing to do with it. It is very obvious that you have no clue what so ever about what is being discussed, it is also very obvious that you have no clue what so ever about what you're trying to use to support your end of the discussion.

Your intelligence is completely outclassed by everyone on this board. Your pathetic attempts to prove otherwise are futile.

That's a BIG negative, ghost rider.

I am NOT one of the pope's people. I consider him to be an agent of evil. No one can claim divinity, or claim to represent GOD. Only God can represent himself. Anything else is a farce, and a mockery of God's plan for us to have a relationship with him. How can you possibly intimately know God, and try to understand what his will is, if you have a flawed man telling you?

Ask the altar boys who were raped by "God's representatives".

Catholics are his "people".

My personal distaste for Duke's arguing semantics and circular logic, applies to anyone who speaks on topics they know nothing about. All Christians are NOT Catholic, and the Pope is a Catholic appointed leader of the Catholic faith. If you "need" him, then you are Catholic.

If you need further instruction on this, fire up Encarta and look up "Protestant reformation", or you can go to Ireland and ask them what they think about the whole Catholic vs Protestant thing.

"Need" is a fickle term. What do you mean by need? The protestants needed the Pope so that they had something to reform. I feel that need should be replaced by follow. I follow the Pope as He leads The Church into a better understanding of God.

While I respect your right to believe that way, you can read, and discern those things on your own.

That's why the Bible was made available. Jesus spoke in parables to force us to think, not to pave the way for a hierarchy to discern it for us. He didn't say to establish the hierarchy either. His emphasis was on a PERSONAL relationship with God, not one put through a faulty human filter that rapes altar boys.

i can't believe i'm defending a guy who represents a god i don't believe in. but, here goes... the pope is supposed to care about and help all people of the world regardless of their religion or lack thereof. this is why he steps in and gives his opinion (like we care) with every situation going on in the world. now, catholics are the only ones who "have" to listen to him, but he is still there for everyone.

I'm dropping the geography discussion as the difference between political and geographical varies from person to person.

and as we all know...the Catholic church has never made any mistakes...oh wait...I seem to recall something about the...what where they? the CRUSADES??? holy wars not completely different to the jihad that Al Queda was launching. Oh...and what about not offering support to Jewish people after and during WWII? And then there's the recent child molesting and known cover ups

Needless to say I have no respect for the pope...fortunately most the catholics I know don't follow the pope...they actually completely ignore the hierarchy the church has set up.

kurds ARE iraqis! no semantics about it!

as for the catholic church, in my opinion it is one of the biggest jokes on this planet. they were wrong for the crusades just like muslims are wrong for their jihad. i assume you are not trying to justify the jihad. after all, everyone(even my children) know that just because one guy does it does not mean it's right for others to do it.

many people do still follow the pope though. especially in mexican and italian families.

The differences between politics and geography doesn't vary between person to person. A dictionary definition is the same no matter who reads it.

Read the difinition that I quoted above, it states that nationality and political regions (governments) are part of Geography.

(Oh, are you sure you're not dropping the geography and politics thing because you don't know anything about either? Because it sure seems like that.)

Duke of Nukesyou people can think whatever you want. Honestly...the only reason I come here is out of pure boredom and your ignorance keeps me entertained. I'm relaying your messages to some of my friends around the globe (Scotland, Austrailia, Venezuela, Pennsylvania, ect.) and they're all laughing...some of them my age...some of them are in their 30's. You have yet to prove me absolutly wrong...you still have only proven my wrong from the American viewpoint...learn to think out of your own little box...move to a third world country and learn the politics and then I'll listen to you

We've already been through this, simpleton.

I have far more multicultural experience than you, been to far more countries than you, and yet you discount everything I state here. Who is the close minded jackass? I have been there, done that, and got the T-shirt.

I think you just like to argue, right or wrong.

You actually have friends? Now that's a BIG surprise.

You were proved absolutely wrong in the first page. This entire discussion is 'Rather or not Kurds, which were born and are living in Iraq are Iraqi citizens'. You havn't even come close to proving yourself right in the slightest. Everything you tried to use to support your end of the discussion are either completely irrelevant, or missrepresented on your part. Most of the stuff you presented actually helped our side and hurt yours.

Rather or not someone is a citizen of a country has nothing to do with their religion, race, or ancestors, or rather or not some government leaders don't like you. You are a citizen of a country if you were born there, have been living there, etc.

This is NOT an American Viewpoint you ignorant little child. You fail to see or use the facts. This is basic Geography, what you should have been learning in early Middle School instead of sleeping.

Now why don't you send your little friends the ENTIRE THREAD without editing ours or your replies and see who they are laughing at.

Actually I found some of his arguments were massively undervalued by the opposition. Because geography doesn't rule the world. Yet I have to agree they were living in Iraq and he has responsibility over them. Yet the kurds had practically had their own state up there. And you see they can't really be called citizens of the Iraq government. They way he treated them they can't really be called citizens either. He made them Iraq's dead weight and something that had to be suppressed. So really he de-citizenized them and made them dead to the rights of the Sunni populations. Like during the American civil war, could you call the Confederate troops Americans? There was no ammendment to the constitution removing them during the war. Yet they couldn't really be called Americans.

As I said above basically they we non-citizens living in Iraq deographically.

they were still considered iraqi citizens as saddam exercised his control over them whenever possible. also, the international community did not and has not recognized a kurdish state(if they did, turkey would invade immediately) as for the civil war, in the south they were considered citizens of the confederate states of america, in the north they were considered citizens of the united states of america. since the war was decided in favor of the north, they were always considered citizens of the united states of america and "criminals"

Now there's a fucking laugh. I spent 6 years living among the people of Venezuela and Indonesia. I have taken countless trips to countries that I cant even remember the name. I've seen things that you can only dream about. I've seen things that you probably have nightmares about. just in Venezuela, I got so used to hearing shotguns going off in the night that I learned to sleep through it. You spent your life living on military bases and such. I spent mine among the people, walking with them and learning how to fit in, learning their language and their way of life.

at 14 I knew more about the way things are in 3rd world countries than you will probably ever know

Kirby and I are war veterans. We've seen worse things than you could imagine. Also shotguns going off in the night! I'm a firefighter/EMT-Paramedic in one of the top 15 violent cities in the country(USA). I've SEEN more bloodshed and violence than ANY of you EVER will. So don't act like you are the expert in the field of violence and life. Wait till your squad gets called to a murder scene, only to SEE the victim was a good friend of yours.

Duke you will NEVER have experience's like that, and I would never wish them upon you. Go back to your sheltered life, in the safety of your mothers arms. You are not ready for the real world.

Dickhead, you can't remember the names, because you haven't ever been there.

If you were half as well travelled as you say you are, then you would have a measure of experience that I don't see when you post. You have this romantic, distorted, bullshit view of what the world is really like.

16 countries Duke. I can name them all. Being shot at in some of them really makes it stick in your mind. You don't forget where you saw "Yankee Die" painted on the sidewalk.

How many languages do you speak? I speak three, mostly learned from being the countries I went to. I was forward eployed on a carrier. No base, just me, and a buddy on liberty drinking it up with locals, and running from Turkish police for a false accusation from a local who hates Americans.

Grow up kid. You don't even approach our caliber of being.

you're right, I haven't seen any of my friends shot dead. but dont sit there and act like I've had a sheltered life. By the time I was 10 I had knives pulled on me regularly and people shouting at me in a language I didn't know. I got in fights with kids twice me age where if I lost, who knows what would have happened. Me and my friends were practically chased out of Venezuela because of Chavez's actions to take over Venezuela and establish an anti-america platform (which little is being done to prevent right now).

Violence or not, I grew up in 3rd world countries. I am friends with several people that are still living in Venezuela and get treated like shit because they look somewhat american. I dont remember the countries because I was 10 when I moved away from Indonesia, and I spent alot of time in more than 14 countries

Sure kid. Whatever.

If you can't even remember what countries they were, why should we take it for granted that these things happened as you say?

You are not a seasoned traveler because you tagged along with daddy. And I am friends with a lot of people worldwide, but I don't trust everything they say, or feel. That's part pf the experience I'm talking about. You don't have it, because you still have this happy little image that friends couldn't possibly be distorting the image of "persecution" they are giving you.

Oh, and by the way.....No one cares about Venezuela. It doesn't relate to any current major struggles in the world, so stop bringing it up. No one cares, but Venezuelans.

Are you really that fucking ignorant that you think we should wait untill a country has the ability to kill us before you do something about it. The people have been rioting because they want their dictator out of power, a dictator who could pose a threat to the US in the future and you say we shouldn't care? I hope to God you dont have children because you must have no hope for their future.

my dad was in Argentina half the time I was in Venezuela, and in California 3/4ths the time I was in Indonesia, so much for your "tagging along with daddy" theory. I dont particularly trust any of these people either, that's why I ask several of my friends and do my best to piece it together.

You go from "This war and president is wrong/stupid" to "Let's kill their leader before they even present a real threat". No we shouldn't care right now, why? Because just like you said, they don't pose a threat to us, but they could possibly pose a threat in the future.

Looking at the way afroman argues he likes Aprime's tactics of argueing. Because he has to look for topics to post insults in. I am not about to lower myself to slinging back or even responding to his comments further. But you are making yourself look like a fool much further then I myself could by using insults on such a large scale compared to your other posts. We here prefer to hear points above hearing useless insults that are so often ignored.

"a little off topic here...but it's a FACT that Bush has waved to the worlds most famous blind person. That means he's either a moron...or he has a sick and twisted sense of humor." Yep, you never said anything along the lines of "he was stupid or wrong"...

That along with nearly every other post you put in that thread was saying that the war was wrong and not necessary.

Pay attention, child. Any person with half a brain in any situation acknowledges the possiblilty that he might be wrong. I dont agree with the war, and I dont think it was the right thing to do, but maybe I was wrong.

You might actually be growing up, you actually, very surprisingly, admitted that you were wrong once. I was never PROVEN wrong. you might not agree with my points or even understand what I say...but not once was I actually PROVEN wrong. Your idea of proof is nothing more than theory. When did I say I was wrong? I sure didn't in this thread...at least not in recent memory, so please, enlighten me. I said I acknowledge the fact that I might be wrong, but I dont feel I am.

Sir PhoenixxWait a second, "Topic: Good site for those of you against mindless slaughter" Mindless slaughter? You mean that isn't about the war? umm...if you ever listened to Rage Against the Machine, you'd realize a good deal of their music revolves around the Vietnam Conflict and the Civil War in Mexico. Seeing as how this is the "Politics" forum...I thought it would be ok to put up a political site. You guys had already made the comment that a persons opinion doesn't matter just because their famous...so I just thought I'd make a point that Tom Morellos opinion matters as well...seeing as how he is a Yale graduate, and made a sarcastic comment about how you cant write him off because he graduated from the same Ivy League college as Bush.

Sir PhoenixxWhat exactly does that have to do with this? Absolutely nothing. This has nothing to do with this discussion, we're not talking about rather or not Bush is smart or not.

I would have to agree...but the funny part is that your side of the argument brought it up.
Actually...you yourself brought it up...and I quote
Sir PhoenixxYou go from "This war and president is wrong/stupid" to "Let's kill their leader before they even present a real threat". No we shouldn't care right now, why? Because just like you said, they don't pose a threat to us, but they could possibly pose a threat in the future.
the first mention of Bush being called an idiot. I said I feel the war is wrong, you then procedd to make up shit to make me look bad by saying I said "This war and president is wrong/stupid"

WHAT Hold on. We KNOW that Saddam used WMD on the Kurds in his attempt to exterminate them. He NEVER gave us any indication that he had dismantled them, no evidence whatsoever. The burden of proof is on him, not us. He gave us every indication that he had them.

What is Bush going to say, "Well, since half of Europe says so he probably doesn't have nukes."

The biggest problem I see so far is this conflict over whether or not the Kurds were Saddam's people. Lets say for a moment that they were not, for Duke's sake. Then, when Saddam gassed them to test out his various WMDs, he was attacking a seperate group of people who were not Iraqis, correct? If so, then they must have had their own soveriegn nation for them not to be Iraqis, as they lived in Iraqi. Therefore, what Saddam did wa an act of war against another soveriegn nation, which means that the U.S. and its allies were justified in ending a military campaign aimed at another nation with the possibility of sending the whole region into war. Hello, does Desert Storm ring a bell? Saddam invaded and we took him out. This is practically the same. He attacked what you Duke are calling a seperate soveriegn people, and therefore justified our attack. Besides, it doesn't really matter if they are considered Iraqis or not...He still attack another group of people with no justification or provocation, and was a threat to those around him. Get a clue here!

hahahaha this was a fun reading

i mostly live on the E&B boards since i play it and has done for the last year and a half.

and we got our share of "Duke of Nukes" lookalikes there also and its always fun to hold up their mouth so they can stick their foot deeper and deeper down their own throat.

thnx for a good laugh Phoenixx

i live in sweden and as you might have known Hans Blix is from sweden.

now think back in time to 98 when all inspectors got the runaround for 1 week for every location the inspectors wanted to check.

does that sounds like someone who has something to hide and wants time to move the stuff or someone who are willingly helping the inspectors?

not only that, they kicked all the inspectors out and destroyed all the monitoring equipment that had been mounted on various sites around iraq.

that doesnt sound like someone who is cooperating with inspectors.

as for the Kurds in Iraq... why are they called "Iraqi Kurds" ?

and the Kurds in turkey are called "Turkish Kurds"?

could it be because they are IRAQI Kurds and TURKISH ?

i just wish that my politicians would have had bigger balls and sent some kind of military help to aid the coalition to kick saddams ass.

and Duke of Nukes, cut your wire because you dont deserve to be online with that small brain of yours, how you even managed to get online with it is beyond belief.

AMEN BROTHER!

The true debate is:

"Do you realize you're being played for a fool or not?" Unfortunately many countries have under the table agreements or other motives. You said it best:

We need more people like you ... and we need more governments to pull their heads out of their asses so they can realize they're as dumb as an ostrich with its head in the [iraqi] sand. lol

I DO NOT want to involve myself into a big heated debate with you all, but:

Quote:

I'm one of your "tree huggers" and guess what. I know the war isn't about oil. He didn't do anything to his own people...the Kurds aren't his people...that's like saying Hitler was killing his own people when he killed the Jewish people in Europe

Quote:

They live in Iraq, therefore they're his people.

Dumbass.

Yep, living in Iraq permanently does of course make you an Iraki. And if you are Kurdish living in Iraq then you are an Iraqi Kurd.

But Kurds did not like Saddam's regime, or government or anything. They were gased cos they were rebelious, and a threat to Saddam. He did it to thwart a rebellion. Even still, its a pretty retarded thing to do...

And a lot of the Happy Iraqis you see on TV happen to be Kurds.

But thats the last post im posting in this thread. I don't wanna get into an arguement.
