I just noticed this.

vloktbokyl I'm tired of it all. I'm tired of the constant whining and utter nonsense that this game produces on a daily bases. I'm tired of joining a server and having to deal with constant cheating accusations and cheaters in the same. I'm tired of working hard and getting a "good job" from a few people, no more, no less. I'm tired of hearing people announce that I have done nothing for this game, and then turn around and use my work on their servers. I'm tired of being lied to, being humiliated because of the network I chose to be apart of, and being lied to and deceived to all just to get something that wasn't theirs or anyone else's in any moral understanding in the first place. I'm tired of hearing the network that I helped to build being called "the worst thing to come to Renegade", and then seeing those same people beg for my release of Dragonade, even though half of the stuff that they crave isn't even found in that part of the package, at least not all of it. I'm tired of being harassed for doing my job. I'm tired of hearing people complain about how it is not our right to refuse them access to what we pay hard cash for in the first place, areas that they have no legal right to be at, and are only there because we allow them to come. I'm tired of seeing people walk right on past our wishes and further disrespect us by evading bans or coming on to our servers and ruining the fun for others just to "get revenge". I'm tired of seeing others stick up for those who have done what I have stated because they felt it was a just cause. I'm tired of seeing what is left of this community drop further and further into a hellish pit that it can not crawl itself out of, no matter who or what comes along. I'm tired of seeing almost an entire year of ground breaking discoveries and hard work get pissed on and ignored, or claimed by another who wouldn't have been able to do what they managed to replicate if it weren't for me in the first place. I'm tired of the constant server attacks and the waste of money they produce. I'm tired of spending my time off away from school and work to put effort into a dying game that only cares about me when I have "new toys" for them to play with. I'm tired of seeing people blindly follow one pack because of who is in charge of said pack, and not give a damn about logic that shows there are others in this "community" that can do just as much, if not more, when given the chance. I'm tired of seeing one person who feels they have the whole world in their hands rule their domain with an iron fist, who feel their words are the final judgement in any situation, and who feels when they say enough is enough, everyone else must shut up. One who doesn't understand the phrase, "My house is your house," and only exist to feed off of the power their reputation has given them. One who feels they truly are the leader of a dying game. My words to that person: You can have it, because nobody else wants it.

I'm tired of saying, "I'm tired," but feel that I must keep up this repetitive form of speech to further get my message across that nobody cares to read in the first place, except those who frequent this server and understand what I have done for everyone. Most of all, I'm flat out tired and disgusted with the figures that keep this game up and running. There are only a few hand picked individuals that deserve any form of recognition what-so-ever, and the rest are better off rotting in Hell. No, wait a minute, they already are.

To the mods that I have released: They are in their final stage. You have the source code to them, so if you want something changed/added/fixed, do it yourself or find someone that can do it for you, and pray that they don't find you any more obnoxious than I do.

To the mods on our servers: They are in their final stage. If a critical bug is found, I'll fix it, but there won't be any more additions to it unless WD puts them in.

To those who want the mods from our servers: No. You weren't deserving enough for what I did give to you; therefore, I will not waste my time giving you something that I poured months of hard work, tears, and sweat in to. I don't care what your self-centered head in your own little world things you deserve. In mine, you don't deserve it, and since mine is more important than yours in this situation, you won't be getting it.

To those who have played in the servers hosted by the network I call my second home: I thank you for showing your support. Continue to have fun with my work, for you are the only ones out of this entire, pathetic game that really did care about what I did. You may have bitched about a few changes, but at least you understood why I made those changes and quickly got over it instead of carrying on like a bunch of children. (Do look at how other networks and smaller communities manage their public relations)

To those who choose not to play in our servers: You are too much of a broad population to speak about, but the majority of you are understanding. Do what you want to do, not what some hotshot says you should do. Think with your mind, not theirs. Make your own choices, and deal with the consequences that may follow with them. To those who have not followed this path, I pity you. That means nothing to you, I'm sure; but, I am not the only one who feels this way. Only your own kind agrees with you, and they are but a tiny spec in the real world. Shape up, or you'll be in for quite a rude awakening.

If you want to follow me, I'll be traveling to my new home. I'll still be on IRC if you need to contact me, but I'll only be in the mod channel and two others that do not concern you. I'll also keep an eye on the forums, but not to enforce moderation or answer questions. Dead6 will always be the game that never was: built on a new engine, made with new support and new opportunities, but most of all, built for a new community to appreciate it. Keep your eye out for this one, and do drop in later on down the road. I promise you, you will not regret it.

To those I share respect for, keep up the good work and do what you wish, but I advise you not to spend too much more time on this game. To everyone else, remember me by these words: "Grow up." Do try something else, for I'm sure if you got in the water, you'd see there is more to the beach than sun bathing.

Most of all, to those who have hurt me in the past for trying to help this game, you are the bunch out of them all that are not worth my time. It is a waste to try to reason with you. Even stating your names aren't worth it. I know who I am talking about, you know that I am talking about you, and everyone else knows who this pointless paragraph is directed towards. If you want to announce that I haven't done anything for this game, go right on ahead; but, the next time you get on WOL or GSA, or any other third-party host, take a look at all the sniper only servers running SSM, or all the CTF servers that wouldn't be there if it weren't for me, or all of the other servers who are running SSAOW, and taking full advantage of it. I've left my impression on this game. For you to denounce that is what one might define as "living in your own, little world." I've done more for this game and these people than you ever have, and yet, they praise your name more than my own for what you did to me. Seems illogical right? Not to these people, and that is why I am leaving, and that is why I advise anyone reading this right now to do the same.

Good day.
