icedog90warrantoheh, I have to say... it looks like toy metal, aka Plastic made to look like metal. I don't mean this a an insult, but the first impression I got when I looked at it was that it belonged to a toy building of some sort.

His main question was what could be done to improve it.

I knew that. However, this was a rare occasion when my first impression caused me to laugh. I offered noting in the form of help simply because I wouldn't know how to fix it.

Though upon thinking about it, I feel that one solution to assist (though not solve) the problem would to have the designs not appear pasted on. This is what caused my initial reaction. In many cases, the toy objects have stickers to replicate any features on the model. Thats exactly what they look like; stickers. Fix up those textures, and the metal finish will show through better.
