Here's an analogy:

If you have a car and it is having engine problems, you take it to a mechanic and he finds that it needs a new head gasket he doesn't charge you $10.00 for a new head gasket and send you on your way does he? No, he has to charge you for his time to take out the old one and put in a new one. Same basic principle.

A piece of wood may only be a couple of dollars, but how many people can cut it, carve it, sand it, and paint it to look exactly like the two dimensional object it is on some website or game box?
