JzinskyProblem with this is, both sides have a very strong argument to which there might be no conclusion. I admit I was for ending her life in a humane way, but now I'm not so sure.

Actually, the right-to-die side has a ridiculously weak argument that works only in a legal setting.

But then again, the only reason it has any strength is because the right-to-life argument can't support itself in court very well.
