Actually I got rid of that whole idea about keeping the website up that I have right now. I am currently working on yet another template that is organized, simple, and not really fancy. I think it may be the best one yet. But I did figure somthing out:

1) I will never get positive feedback about my website from these forums in my life.

2) Whatever I do will never be good enough for you guys.

3) And three, this is the only place where I can get quick feedback when I need it most.

4) I am going to keep re-doing my wensite until I do get some positve feedback. But unlike last time, I will be using the same topic, but renaming it. And boo hoo if all I talk about is my website? What else is there to talk about? The world is dull right now and some of you guys are nitpicking at the dumbest things I do.

But I am not going to give up hope on my website nd maybe someday you guys will find it in your hearts to say something nice to me or my website. The only true person ho ever stuck up for me in the forums has been SickO.

I will not give up.
