Yeah, it was pretty pointless and annoying, but it's always funny to do that to people who can't even attempt to use proper English. Don't any of you say any BS about how maybe English isn't their first language, because you know what? You don't learn in your foreign language English class to spell you like u, or are like r. If it were merely grammatical mistakes, then I would understand that they probably don't speak English as their primary language. However when you mis-spell common words that you probably learned in the first chapter of your foreign language English book or whatever, then you probably shouldn't be taking the class. Also . . . don't any of you give me any BS about how I probably don't speak a foreign language, because I do. . . I'm in my second year of Spanish at my highschool. I would have much rather learned German, but my school doesn't offer it.
