JPNODpeople with slow comps still now also use Norton and that kind of stuff wich realy brings down a comp.I beg to differ. I've used "slow" computers for quite a while, and have only recently obtained a computer of any decent speed. During that time, I knew my computer inside and out and was able to optimize it for the best speeds possible. It's not so much the computer that's slow as it is the user that's using it. Anyone can use slow and unoptimized programs (in fact, many people do).

HomeyOh I believe it lags the computer i'm on right now, I get hottible fps anyways so I don't get accused. But this is a 1.8 (not bad for ren really) but 256mb ram with norton and all kinds of other shit that isn't mine running - it lags. He has 2gb ram and 2.8ghz so it doesnt make sense.Is it 256MB RAM or 2 GB RAM? In either case, are you sure you've got the latest drivers? You'd be amazed how much they could boost your framerate.
