Subject: OT: Firefox corruption?
Posted by Doitle on Sat, 21 May 2005 14:15:09 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

WYSIWYG > Notepad for the simple fact that, Time is Money. When you have no job and live in a basement you can spend all your awake time plodding away in Notepad lining things up and making your website. If you, maybe have a deadline, and perhaps have other things to do, a wife, kids, a boss who didn't just hire you to play around in singleplayer IRC all day.

Making a website in Notepad takes some HTML knowledge. WYSIWYG however isn't a walk in the park either. Sure anyone can do it, but it won't look good. It takes just as much skill to make a professional and streamlined website in a WYSIWYG editor as it is to do it in Notepad. Wether making a table means dragging that little tool at the top to say, 4x4, or typing <table><tr><td></td><td></td><td></td><td></td></tr><tr><td></td><td></td><td></td><td></td></tr><tr><td></td><td></td><td></td><td></td></tr><tr><td></td><td></td><td></td><td></td></tr></table>.

If the table doesn't look good it doesn't look good, in Notepad or WYSIWYG. You have to have the knowhow and the feel for design to make sure the website is astetically pleasing and serves its purpose.