the way i see it..
adobe could care less about people hackin their stuff

Wrong, if that was the case, we wouldn't have serial numbers and activation processes.

Don't even try to use that excuse to rationalize theft.when they notice it is warezed by students they won't be so hard on them. They know they will only learn to work with the products made by them so when they later will use it for good use they will need to buy a license. (well thats what they think)

O and i got what the topic starter needs =P

The good thing about an ICT student is the fact that everything you program or do with school is for a part property of school, even the bad stuff   .

It's one of those moments in the year I agree with Aircraftkiller.

And guys come on, so what he posts alot of questions. You guys reply alot what's the diffrence. It's just as easy to ignore you reply's as his posts. And It's not like all his posts are just basic spam. And don't say his posts move other topic's to the 2nd page, bacause It's not like this forum is so active.

So what he isn't talented in making websites, is that really a problem. The only reason he posts this much is because he wants to improve himselve in making his website. Wich altough still doesn't look perfect at least has improved.

I don't say you should not make fun of him, but comeon take another hobby. he lately gets the most replys on his topics. Aircraftkiller is keeping a bit low a few weeks and you guys have a new hobby to complain about.
