Subject: Re: Quite possibly the best political cartoon ever.
Posted by SuperFlyingEngi on Tue, 14 Jun 2005 22:29:04 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Doitle wrote on Tue, 14 June 2005 16:48Bush isn't the wisest leader ever, but he's on the right side. You liberals have managed to stall him so he's just riding out his term. During his first term he was kicking ass all over the place, but you just kept whining and whining and now he's just trying to maintain. I wish he would realize though that he's set. He can't get reelected anyhow, he should follow his morals and act.

You mean stalled by the 10 filibusters in both of Bush Jr.'s terms?

cowmisfitIts not his fault if your rich or poor, get off your lazy ass and get a job. In America they're are no poor people, only lazy. You have all the doors open to you, try your best, work hard and you can have anything you want in our nation.

Clinton proved that poor people aren't poor because they are poor, it's because there aren't any jobs for someone with an average intelligence. 90 IQ isn't much for the average person, and if there aren't enough easy store jobs open, they're not going to be able to get a job without a degree. Sure, some people are lazy, but very few. Try living on no money for a year and then tell me that you honestly believe all people without jobs are just lazy and don't want one.

But I suppose I'm the stupid one for not believing Republican talking points where they alienate their own party.

cowmisfit(some cases this is broken and paid less, but this isn't a perfect world)

The whole point of Bush's immigration policy is that immigrants can come in and get paid less than the minimum wage so his big company farmer friends can have what amounts to slave labor, farmers who have no representation, don't really exist in the country, and can't leave their situation because of a lack of economic options.

BTW: I saw the impossible today. A Republican Texas Represenative [Ron Paul] taking an anti-war stance on C-SPAN. Guess his mind drugs wore off.