There's are two different intelligent options.

You could run the installation program and select "Remove" from the list of three options(Modify, Repair, Remove). This will safely and cleanly uninstall Renguard.

Alternately, you can access this menu from the Add/Remove Programs listing under the Control Panel in your operating system. Like I said, this will give you the same menu as if you've clicked the installer. I don't suggest trying to manually uninstall the thing by deleting files and registry keys, personally. But hey, if you wanna destroy your Windows Registry, by all means. . .
