We have restored everything in full. There were a few last things that Blazer finished this morning. The old drive is "unmounted", meaning it can't be accessed by accident and potentially cause another crash. I'm about 99.9% sure that the problem is now solved. We'll have another short outage when they pull out the old drive, but hopefully that box will enjoy months-long uptimes once again.

Thanks for your compliments and such... I do this as a learning experience as much as anything else. I'm just glad you understand why there had to be some downtime.