I don't believe in dentists, myself. For a long while, I didn't brush my teeth at all. My teeth were strong as ever, even though they were supposedly being continually racked with all sorts of plaque, bacteria, etc. In fact, the only real reasons I started brushing my teeth are the fact that every once in a while, I do like my breath not to smell like sulfur and burnt matches, and in addition to that, I've been having recurring nightmares about my teeth just. . .falling out. All of a sudden. It creeps me out. But I digress. . .

The reason I don't believe in dentists is that every time my mom went to one, they always, always found something wrong with her teeth. She now wears dentures because doctors said her gums were diseased and whatnot. I bet if she went back now'a days, they'd find something wrong with her freaking dentures. It's insane!
