I think something is vastly wrong with collision detection on your system, as I have never seen such awful collision detection. I've seen this game played in tons of conditions by tons of players, and played under tons of conditions on tons of servers. I have missed kills by mere pixels of distance, but you can go an entire on-screen inch away and manage to earn a kill. This fact leads me to believe something is wrong with your client, or it is loading the wrong data. I believe your client is purposely using incorrect data in order to provide an unfair advantage.

I notice you said the word aimbot a few times, I never did say it though.
