The "fire" thing is a secret? Hell, I'm a pyromaniac at heart. If I wasn't so scared about it(and had the money to spend to do it), I'd buy a can of WD-40, go hose down some wooden stuff. . .trees. . .shit like that, light a match, and torch some stuff. I love playing with fire. . . I have a can of butane for my (broken)torch-lighter and I sometimes spray it in the lid, or in the sink, or on a patch of dirt outside, light a match, and watch it burn. Just to watch it burn. I can't honestly say I've thought about lighting people on fire, but I bet that'd be fun, too. . . If we ever go to war(and I don't mean like "The War on Iraq". . .) and I'm in the Army's front lines, pray they don't give me a flamethrower. I'd probably freak out and start torching friend and foe. . . That's pretty much what happened when I helped my friends burn crops a few years ago. I just started dragging a plant around that was on fire and gleefully skipped across the field until the fumes started making me dizzy. That actually knocked me back into reality. >_>;

. . .I think I see why I should've kept this a secret, now. XD goes off to play Return to Castle Wolfenstein to feed his firey hunger or something
