

---

Subject: Re: Time Travel and other stuff.

Posted by Renegade on Tue, 11 Oct 2005 17:29:53 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

So then Kanezor, if im readin your statement correctly, you Honestly think that we are the only living things in the universe?

And the aliens we see are our evolved forms?

Hmm sounds kinda fishy. Seems kind of a waste of space to only have one planet in the entire universe have life.

I dunno man maybe your right, but odds are, there are other life forms out there.

takeing a qucik glance at "Daily Planet" last week reveiled that NASA (North American Space Administration i belive) already has plans to go search out those planets with similar atmosphere and distance from the sun as us.

And is the "aliens" were ourselves in the future, technically, they would still be aliens since they are not from "this world".

And personnally, i wouldnt wanna have two saucer-like eyes and be green. Not to say thats how we look like any way.

Which brings another point.

There was a movie in 1932 called "They cam from outer Space" Redone many time. However, in the movie they recalled "aliends" to be green and have sauce-like eyes, well shortly after that (and im being totally serious) People started to claim to see alien space-ships and what-not floating in the sky.

(this was on history channel, dont blame me im just the messenger) Do you think its possible that Aliens havent contacted us yet?

If the universe is 5 billion (give or take) yrs. old, then how can these other life-forms be more advanced then us?

Shouldnt life-forms advance faster then others?

Hmm, i dunt know the answer to that one.

If we are supposedly the fastest evolving living-things known to man, does that make us the fastest evolvin things in the universe?

Doubt it. But i dont see why aliens would come down to take a look, scare people then fly away like cowards.

If they are that advanced, then wth are they afriad of?

Im beginning to rant, so i think ill end this in a final note.

: I dont think aliens are us from another time zone coming back to say hello

: I dont think time travel is possible EXCEPT by going lightspeed (look it up, its proven)

: I dont think Aliens have contacted us

: I think AREA 51 is a publicity stunt thats ben going on for years.

: and if im proven wrong, why havent these "time-travelers" come back to say hello? i think our scientists and (heaven-forbid) world leaders, would love this type of technology.