Subject: Re: I'm sorry
Posted by terminator 101 on Fri, 21 Oct 2005 21:15:10 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

Goztow wrote on Fri, 21 October 2005 02:46Once a cheater, always a cheater in my eyes. Even if you don't do it again, you've done it before and ruined lotsa games and created lotsa stress. People do change over the years. I have confession to make: When I was 8, (I am 19 now) I used to play Doom 2 and Descent 1 with cheats(both games on singleplayer of course). I don't remember why I did it like that(it was long time ago) but I do remember that once I beat the whole game, I realized that games are not made to be beaten quickly, they are made to last as long as possible, so I spoiled the whole game for me(or in another words "cheaters cheat themselves") and that the game was no longer fun(I cheated my self out of the fun of the game), so I swore that I will never use cheats to win again.

But I think that cheating in singleplayer and multiplayer is very different. In singeplayer, you spoil the fun for you. In multiplayer, you spoil the fun for others.