OK i think i know what the hell u are talking about now cave man. it came to me at work today. there is a file that a person can make for brenbot for ignore. but here is the thing, it is so that the person that is on the list can not be forced to use renguardon that server it will ignore the request also it will let the person join a pure server without renguard. it still has nothing to do with wether i am running it or not. if u are running rg and your name is on the ignore list it will still state that u are using it in that server u rg the person. and it will also tell u if they are not running it, and if u are not running it and on the ignore list for the server u can not force rg on them. that is how it works i remember seeing that a long time ago. and the client that i run on my computer has nothing to do with the server so when i am connected it does not matter if i was on a ignore list because i still show in the rg servers. LMAO dude u should read more carefully because i really dont think that i have access to the main rg server to put my name on a ignore list and i dont think they would let me do that.

also read what the other ppl are telling u about the look ups.