

---

Subject: Re: Violent-game ban

Posted by Nukelt15 on Tue, 14 Mar 2006 01:45:43 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Quote: You might be grown up, but what about the little children with their vulnerable minds?? Growing up with disgusting and gory violence may make them think that that is OK.

That's a load of crap as well. If some kid grows up thinking violence is OK "because I saw it on TV or in a game or whatever" then their parents have failed to teach them the difference between real life and fantasy. It is not the government's job to "protect" kids from "bad influences" (in quotes because it is entirely subjective what constitutes a "bad influence"), that's what parents are for. I've yet to start even so much as a food fight in my life, and I've been playing violent games and seeing violent movies and whatnot since early elementary school- I'd like to think that's because my parents did their job, not because some suit in Washington decided I could only do what they thought was best for me.

If you're concerned about it, start a parental awareness campaign- don't go putting shit like this in legislation. The government should not have a say in the matter, period.

---