BIOS Settings have not been fiddled with since buying the PC so dont believe the problem will be there - but will check for 8x AGP settings.

Will ensure my sound card drivers are up to date

My motherboard does not use "on board" graphics or sound

I am going to turn Avast back on, turning it off made no difference and dont really want to pick up a virus and create more problems

I had a trained computer technician take a look at my motherboard to check port compatibility and had him check the card I was purchasing for compatibility so pretty sure that isn't an issue also.

I have a 17" Flat panel monitor - have been running ren through it for over a year and never had problems like this until now.

Yes the connection is 2 meg, recently upgraded from 512k but was working fine after the upgrade - I have tried in several different servers small and large games, problem still occured in a 2v2 when I was in my base with no1 around, not even any vehicles on the map.

I will defrag my HDD (although it has been formatted relitavely recently and only has 18 out of 240 Gigs full) to see if that helps the HDD speed at all, my main concern is that it may be a CPU problem as I cant really afford a replacement at the moment.

Many thanks to everyone who has posted suggestions, will keep trying anything new so keep em coming please-will be sure to let you know if I get it sorted.
