DarkDemin wrote on Wed, 21 June 2006 17:36Wasting money to find out who wasted money just to throw those people in prison just to waste more money is just that... a waste of money.

So your position is that we shouldn't enforce laws in America? That's completely ridiculous. And the point isn't that people wasted money, it's that they stole it. When over a billion dollars in taxpayer money is even possibly stolen, it's always worth investigating. Because who's to stop it from continually occuring?

Even only taking into account which option is cheaper, which is stupid, investigating where this money went is definitely the better option. And since Congressional Republicans are so adamantly opposed to doing so, what does that tell you?

Honestly, that's a really doltish opinion you had there.

EDIT: Grammatical Errors