It has come to my attention that one possible way to make people like these listen to reason is to yell louder than they do. Therefore, an experiment:

YOU FAIL AT LIFE!

Are they taking off their tinfoil hats yet? No? Oh, drat. I guess we'll just ignore 'em then.

This thread is hereby hijacked in the name of general forum mental health. I declare this thread re-dedicated to pursue an answer to the eternal question posed by Socrates, who said: "I drank what?"

I propose that the answer to this question must have been Pepsi, for its foul flavor and ability to induce vomiting. If this is true, then Socrates must have been a Coke-drinker. Agree/disagree?
