
Subject: Re: Some Bullshit I would Like to Clear
Posted by cheesesoda on Thu, 07 Sep 2006 01:31:36 GMT
View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

fl00d3d wrote on Wed, 06 September 2006 21:19Jball: My paypal has three checking accounts and one credit card bound to the account - so I know what you're talking about. But I do not wire money back and forth from my checking accounts ... I simply use the PayPal debit card which takes the funds directly from the PayPal account. Much more convenient for keeping track of business expenses (especially since the checking accounts are personal). And don't listen to Greg and his advice about PayPal. If he was so pro with it he would have an account that was older than 2 months, confirmed by adding at least one verifiable proof of identity, and would have been able to manage the business finances from the get go. Instead he has an unverified account and a security flag by PayPal (that I still don't know what it's for).

If I go to pay for something via PayPal and don't have the money in the account (as usually is the case), it does an instant transfer, taking it out of my bank account (and/or credit card). Wouldn't this be the case on the PayPal account with the debit card? If you make a purchase and don't have enough in the PayPal account, it takes the money out of said banking/checking account? If so, I bring up the point about allowing a 15 year old with that money, or is that what the restrictions included?
