Exactly, what Oblivion said.

What point of traveling through TIME don't people understand?

Lets say someone killed your entire family yesterday, but then you went back in time and stopped it from happening. It is as if it never happened in the first place... no it DIDN'T happen in the first place.

You can't prove if someone from the future came to us. And even if you did, it would never reach the light of day because people from the future can fix that.

Another example, lets say you see yourself from the future walking the street. You don't make a scene and go on about your day. The second that you tell someone, it will be heard, and thus be open for altering in the past, and thus changing you ever saw anything.

So basically your options are to keep it to yourself for ever, or erase it from ever happening.
