

---

Subject: Re: MSN Hacker

Posted by \_SSnipe\_ on Fri, 28 Dec 2007 08:14:18 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

R315r4z0r wrote on Thu, 27 December 2007 20:00What is changing your password going to do? It doesn't matter if you change it or not, your password would still be given out.

This reminds me of a similar MSN hack. I was talking to my friend, who lives in Canada. He goes to a French school and basically knows French as a second language (or first if English is his second)

Anyway, I'm talking to him and all of a sudden he replies a message that is all in French. And I'm sitting there going eh?

In the reply, there was a link.. however what I did first was I copied what he said and pasted it on a web translator. Turns out it said something really gay like "Click here to see me naked, but make sure you don't tell anyone else" or something like that. Obviously, I didn't click the link and I said back to him "No" and I didn't get a reply for a good 10 min. All of a sudden he logs in, which was odd cause he was already logged in. He told me he got this MSN virus that kicks him off MSN and sends people crap like that. I told him the message that it sent me and he told me that it was the same message that got him infected.

O_o

SMART.....

---