

---

Subject: Re: Image hosting and compression before uploading

Posted by Starbuzz on Fri, 25 Jan 2008 06:03:37 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

I used to have imageshack but that is what it was: a run down shack.

I moved to Photobucket and have been a happy chum ever since. Simply the best TBH. No BS, page errors, login delays and what not. You can upload 3 pictures at once and unlimited bandwidth ofcourse.

Plus the site is arranged in a very clear and helpful format that speeds up your work.

The thing I noticed with Photobucket is that JPEG's and BMP files get smudged if you upload them. So when uploading into Photobucket, make sure the image is PNG. PNG is a good flexible format for me.

As for the resolution, it depends. If I am posting a picture in the forum, then I ALWAYS resize so it fits the screen. I can understand the frustration of seeing a big damned picture that just screws up the thread. That is being inconsiderate of others.

I never tried n00bstories but I know it is good as well. Speaking of n00bstories, I registered there like 2 weeks ago but I have yet to go visit LOL.

---