The answer is "yes I did," but not anymore. Their games used to be products of respectable quality, but over the years they've become increasingly lax in quality control and also have been pushing more and more "same old, same old" games targeted at competitive gamers exclusively (as opposed to, you know, those of us who play games for recreation instead of sport). I do not like the way EA operates and I do not like the direction they've been heading with their games.
