ROFL. Apart from anything else, unless there is a restriction on the length of an MSN name (which, IIRC, there is not) then there are theoretically an infinite number of possible names.

I have actually seen this one before a few years back, the story they link to is dated 2001. <http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/business/4778046.stm> is the follow up story, although I am not sure why they dont place some sort of disclaimer at the top of the old story to warn users who might be too thick to realise it's a fake.
