Subject: Re: Mouses
Posted by Renx on Tue, 03 Jun 2008 12:19:47 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

havoc9826 wrote on Sat, 31 May 2008 18:30I used to have the Logitech MX-1000 wireless laser mouse (I had two), but after 1.5 years with each, the middle button stopped responding. Now I have a Logitech G5, but my desk's kinda cluttered, so it's a bit harder to use with the wire. Also, when I'm playing, sometimes Renegade thinks I'm still holding the left button when I'm not, and that gets annoying. I dunno why a USB-only mouse would work worse than a USB mouse that can use a USB-to-PS2 adapter. Otherwise, it's great.

I have one too, it's great. However I got a free MX518 with my laptop and have been using that recently now instead of the MX1000. The 1000 only has 800dpi where as the 518 can toggle between 800dpi and 1600dpi