

---

Subject: Re: GLOBAL WARMING

Posted by sadukar09 on Wed, 25 Jun 2008 10:50:14 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

R315r4z0r wrote on Tue, 24 June 2008 21:32I really don't understand this issue very much.

Would someone care to explain WHY SHOULD WE CARE how much involvement we played, as humans, in global warming?

Does it really make a difference knowing who started it and who continued it and who lead it to where?

The way I see it is that someway or another the global temperature is rising and something should or shouldn't be done about it. Why should we spend so much time pondering who started it? If we think it is a problem, we should try and do something to fix it. If not, we should just leave it alone... end of story.

There have been global temperature increases and decreases hundreds of thousands of times in the history of this planet, so I really do not see what the big deal is..

Because another ice age will kill MILLIONS of people when it occurs, would you not save a million lives by not...using fossil fuels?

---