On current player count, not limit. Basically if someone looks for a server, what would they look for?

- I want to play at a server that is best filled up -> sounds like a weird critirium.
- I want to play at a server that has 24 players max, even if there is only one in currently. -> possible, but less likely than:
- I want to play at a server that has around 24 players currently. -> Most likely, imo.

That's why we chose for current player count sorting. Note that most active servers with more than one or two players usually fit in one page anyway, so it does not really matter which one is on top of the other, it's just that they are in a understandable/easy to use order for the player who wants to join.

Sorting by player limit after ingame player count might be a good idea though.
