My name is Spencer, I'm 26 years old living in Welling, Kent. Which is only a couple of miles away from being London, so it's easier to just say I live in London for the sake on non-Uk'ers.

I'm a print operator who's the substitute for the IT analyst when he is on leave. I've been succession planned for the role, and they did want to put a second analyst on the account. But due to the hard hitting credit crunch and financial climate (especially in co-operate banks such as the one I work in) that isn't going to happen.

I earn pretty decent money, enough to pay for my three bedroomed house and a pretty expensive wedding a couple of months ago to my lovely wife.

I'm involved in several communities based around the w3d engine, and have always been keen on modding it.

I'm currently studying for qualification in programming. I will hopefully complete this in a couple of years, probably changing my career when and if that happens.

I plan on starting a family next year, there could be some complications as i've had an operation on one of my testicles and my wife has endometriosis. But fingers crossed it will be fine.

I did hope to emigrate when I could get out of my mortgage, I am not near negative equity like some of my friends, but if i'd of sold last year I would of had 90-100 thousand pounds sterling in the bank. I regret not doing it then, but with so much work on the house we wanted to stay a while. Plus my wife wanted the wedding in this country in a Church (not that I am Christian). That's probably my biggest regret in my life so far actually. If I was to sell now, I would have around 35-45 thousand pound sterling, probably less. The credit crunch doesn't look like its going away soon either, so I guess i'll be in England for a while to come yet.

I don't like to label my religious beliefs, but I guess I follow pretty much Spiritualism and Bhuddism, perhaps being influenced by Spiritualism more. Although they both over-lap allot anyway in terms of meditation.

I'm a calm person normally, quite a jel0s when it comes to my wife, but other than that i'm pretty cool normally. It takes allot to piss me off most of the time.

I'm at the stage of my life now where I prefer to have parties at a friends home, or my own. Going out always seems to cause trouble, which I am not interested in at all. I'm six feet six inches tall with sixe twelve shoes, and no light weight either weighing in at 18 stone. But that's deceptive, i'm not a violent person at all, I hate fights. Don't get me wrong though, i'm there for my friends in a club and the first to throw a punch in someones face if it needs to be done.

I enjoy playing computer games, online and offline. I also play poker quite regularly with some friends, i'm not that bad really.

Hope I didn't waffle on too much, but now you have a better in-sight into who I am.
