

---

Subject: Re: Red Alert 3 buying survey

Posted by Nightma12 on Thu, 09 Oct 2008 18:46:03 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

StealthEye wrote on Wed, 08 October 2008 14:06My guess is that it's usually used as an excuse to use pirated software. I'm quite convinced that those who voted for piracy here would have anyway, even without annoying anti piracy measures. (Then you'd get stories like "they just make it too easy, they are asking for it!").

I agree that the anti piracy measures have little to no to a negative effect though. They only make it more challenging for crackers to crack the software so it won't really help much avoiding the eventual pirated version and simultaneously people do get annoyed by it. The only use there probably is is for the first few days if people really want the game and there is no pirated version yet.

I have *never* pirated a game. Untill last week when i downloaded Spore out of spite because of the DRM.

I purchased C&C3, KW even Generals. But will be pirateing RA3.

---