

---

Subject: Re: AVITARS

Posted by Aircraftkiller on Sat, 25 Oct 2008 03:34:56 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Quackpunk wrote on Wed, 22 October 2008 01:34samous wrote on Tue, 21 October 2008 19:03here is one i used on a star trek forums:

I always found star trek to be redundant and full of unnecessary fictional sci-fi lingo.

It's neat that you brought that up, considering a lot of technology today was foreseen or inspired by Star Trek. Cell phones in particular are one device that bears a striking resemblance to the ST:TOS communicators. Touch panel displays, voice activated computers and things like warp drive are reality or are within the realm of physics. so all of that "unnecessary sci-fi lingo" is more of a benefit to the show than you seem to appreciate, which is fine, because I doubt the show was written with people like you in mind.

---