The President should be an extension of the people's feelings and opinions. He shouldn't be an always act on his own opinions kind of person because all that does is make the lazy people who voted for him even more lazy because Obama wont let them get involved.

That's why I think this entire system has gone down the crapper. People don't care if they get a good leader or not, they just want someone to do something so that they, as American citizens, don't have to worry about anything.
