The only thing I can think of is perhaps a firewall closing the connection somewhere between you and the IRC server (either software or hardware). I know from past experience that perl tends to lock up for a while if it's trying to open a port and the connection attempt gets silently blocked on the recieving end, but it shouldn't take 20 minutes to time out even then.