I do respect you being willing to ask for help, but answer this seriously: how long do you actually take to figure out problems on your own, including searching Google before coming on here and posting?

I wouldn't guess very long because it seems like every 20 minutes you're posting some tech question. If you DO take a considerable time, perhaps you just need to learn to utilize search engines better, or you're just one unlucky son of a bitch who always strikes out, but I can't imagine that's the case. There's too much information on the Internet for you to not be able to find an answer for a vast majority of your questions.