Separation of Church and State is as I said before, not allowing any religion to make any rules but still have some influence in the morality of the rules. Separation from Church and State takes all religious influence, good or bad out all together. I agree that having a church run state is bad for this country because of the way we are, but we shouldn't cut it out all together because some liberal atheists are butthurt about it. It is necessary for the moral fiber of America.

Allow me to refer you to the second panel of this comic.

My morals are founded on 'conscience' ... aka, whether or not something is a dick thing to do. I don't need a religion to tell me what is right, or wrong. Humans are generally programmed to know what makes a person an asshole.
