There's no real effective way to permanently ban someone, which is why temporary bans are much better. It gives the banned person a good reason to respect their ban. If you permanently ban someone, he won't have a reason to respect his ban anymore.

However, as said before: I will permanently ban if really needed, and I'll count on the community to keep an eye on new accounts and existing double accounts then.

I don't think it annoys anyone here that Scrin is PM'ing others?
