so we have a real old game (in internet-games-time) and we lose more and more players...
do we really need new communities? havent we enough empty/unused servers, do we really need more?

and spoony:
you know that the pointmod did empty our server why you try to hide this fact?
and why do you try in the jelly-forum to get yourself banned?
for all others who dont know what i talk about:
a jelly community member tried a poll with the target to get spoony banned from there. and now spoony say something like:" ok, several players want see me banned there. jelly said he listen to this comunity, so he should ban me"
if they ban you you can say: see, i told you all that the jelly-community is unfair to me, they just banned me from theyr forum.

do you dont think that your actings in the jelly forums goes to far?

and you still didnt affirm that you know that the pointmod did empty our servers though you know this fact for a long time now.
and thats the next point. lets imagine that somebody with the pointmod included could have the first server on the list, and it dies coz the pointmod. it would proof only that it dont need a server in the a00 listings, or that it will get filled with many players, coz they only would play 1-2 maps, and then they would join another server, without pointmod. like it happened in the past, as j1 had the pointmod included.

greetz telly ^^
