The reason behind this was that we just don't have a separate release. Our current pointfix code is either combined with BICEPS (which isn't very much good tbh) or TT as far as I know. Also, the reason at the time not to release it was pretty simple, we should be done wit the ladder bits pretty soon (or so we though) and then release it with a (possible) ladder patch. After that it became clear that TT would be created and StealthEye and me expected it to take less time than it does now. (this due to various circumstances like finding new bugs that need to be fixed or the need of reverse enginering a function that seems small but then suddenly affects the whole of renegade)

Wait, perhaps we do have a version that is integrated with our released version of BIATCH. Not sure, I'll try to look this up this afternoon.
