danpaul88 wrote on Mon, 11 January 2010 01:49Probably dirt on the sensors under the buttons on the mouse, if you have a compressed air can try pointing it beneath each of the buttons and giving it a quick blast.

That or buy a new mouse, they are hardly expensive... you can get a decent Logitech mouse for about £15.
problem with compressed air i have this model http://www.anumex.com/pictures/1061845-1.jpg cant get under the buttons id try force but i dont feel like breaking it ... yet would it just be better to get a new one?