ty! I too hope it turns out very good.

So my paint stripper did its job and now the fuselage is all stripped off. It is now ready for the primer. After that I would paint it black and top it off with a nice clear coat.

But I wanna let this dry off and return to room temperature. I was working outside and its sooooo cold.

So while that is going on, I am going to prep the cockpit glass now. The green cockpit frames must be painted black but the paint should not touch the glass. To get a nice result, I have to cover the glass with paper tape. This will allow me to spray-paint the frame without the paint going on the glass.
