Yeah, it's a risk, but a pretty small one. You just need to be smart about what you're buying and who you're buying from.

In your case, I'd try to find a used 4870/4890 1GB from XFX. That way, the seller can transfer their warranty to you.

However, you do have some other options:

The second one has 1GB of memory, and is moderately overclocked.

Here's a 5770: <http://www.newegg.com/Product/Product.aspx?Item=N82E16814141116R>

Just remember that these don't have a normal warranty because they're Open Box.
