Not worth my time.

I took my site down. I hope you produce something that's worth talking about. I started playing this game for recreation. Then as my love grew for the game I got deeper into it (running sites, training people, purchased a 768k upstream package so I could host from my house, etc).

Then it got all political.

This is a game. And it's giving me a tumor just arguing over it. After much thought, I figured the best way to defend myself would be to take the site down and do my own thing. I don't feel like this is going anywhere (one way or another) because everyone is flaming irrationally and immaturely.

I do, however, stick to my claims of my knowledge. And maybe sometime I'll have the chance to display that for you. Who knows. (And just for the record I've been messing with computers since I was 6 years old ... so I don't know where that guy got a one year training pipeline). Oh, and you might want to read this: http://www.w3.org/TR/xhtml1/ . Its one of the latest recommendations and in it there is a section on meta tag usage.

Whatever the result of all this mess --- I'm not going to sweat over it anymore. I know in my heart who I am and what I know. Maybe it wasn't approached the correct way ... but it doesnt really matter anymore.

Again, good luck to you and enjoy the game.
