That's cool. Anyone can make untextured models - I have about two thousand different models, mostly untextured, laying around on various hard drives. It isn't difficult these days.

You still don't seem to grasp what I'm saying: You, as in you, yourself, aren't doing anything. You're not developing these untextured models. You're not painting the models. You're not rigging them. You're not really doing much of anything except being an ideas guy, and frankly, your ideas suck.

/Also, nice job having someone lift artwork from Thomas Szakolczay on that little briefcase thing lol
