We have been working hard to make a renegade community people enjoy and have fun at. We have been quite successful at getting a decent player base in game and on forums. We have also recently started doing community wars that have always been 8 v 8s or greater and it is starting to bring the community together more.

I ask that what ever person grudges you hold against any of our moderators or administrators you do not call RenCorner down because of it. We are all part of some of the few communities left. We should be working together not trying to have some competition over who can get more players. The most important thing is getting the new players to return.

I did not make a post to start a flame war with any of you, but there have been many things said that are completely immature and have no purpose except to hurt another person.

Thanks,

here's the thing - RenCorner mods have been making bullshit claims and statements along with random attacks on non-RenCorner players and remaining community members / communities if you go back, you'll see that much of what was said in this topic and others was in direct response to those people your very last paragraph sums up the kind of things mods representing RenCorner said and did, and ultimately got responded to for

Ani just said he doesn't care what his mods do here, which i think is the wrong approach to take to the issue - what you're seeing is the result of their actions turning back against RenCorner because they're representing it go back and read for yourself - it's all there

Have a nice day
